I spent the weekend camping with friends but it wasn't very successful. Sally is not very ⁽¹⁾ and we had to wait an hour for her to turn up. Apparently she had a problem with the train, but didn't have the common ⁽²⁾ to ring me on my mobile and warn me she would be late. Then, when she finally arrived, she had a friend with her, called Jill. She was quite nice, but so ⁽³⁾ that she didn't really speak to anyone for the first day. She'd got a bit more self- ⁽⁴⁾ by the end of the weekend. However, she didn't seem to have much ⁽⁵⁾: we were only 400 metres from a farm but Jill said she couldn't make tea because we had no water! Bill got angry at that, for no real reason, and poor Jill almost started crying. Bill's problem was that he never really wanted to go camping in the first place, so he was pretty ⁽⁶⁾ most of the time.

Most people believe that health is very important and, because of this, many are trying to eat in a healthier way. For example, fruit is now the second-favorite snack in the US, Japan is currently promoting cocoa as a healthy alternative to soft drinks, and people in the UK are eating less salt and more low-fat margarine and milk. These changes in eating habits are also having an effect on the food market. Global sales are increasing for soy drinks and drinkable yogurts more than any other food, and sales of bread, pasta, and cereals are growing much more slowly. People are also becoming more interested in fresh fruit and vegetables, and farmers' markets are getting more popular. When they can, people often opt for natural goodness, and they're buying more products that are healthy, like fruit, salads, and nuts. They are also buying products that help protect the environment, like organic vegetables. So it's clear that things in the food world will never be the same again.
